3) By using the Sobig worm, attackers infected the email address by the victims. Now I can say that the Kb9mdM-NE.B is coming back in my computer. I have been to lots of websites. I think the program Kb9mdM-NE.B is coming in my computer from the website "thankyou.info". I don't know how to remove it. But I have deleted the virus by hand, using the K-Lite. After that I used malwarebytes and Avira. Then the virus started again, but much faster. Now I want to remove it using K-Lite. But I can't find the entry in the registry! Can you help me to solve the problem? The recent Sobig variant, KB9mdM-NE.B, targets the old Windows 98/ME platforms, and its creator targets it as a portable malware family. Sobig.F will download the real Sobig in an encrypted container and copy it to the %TEMP% folder. Once the download is complete, Sobig.F will automatically delete its own executable. However, the file will be named after the current date. For example, if the system date is March 30th, 2020, then the malware file will be named KB9mdM-NE.B-30-03-2020-43C2C61570. So, your machine would probably be infected with something like KB9mdM-NE.B-30-03-2020-43C2C61570.exe. Now that you know that KB9mdM-NE.B is being downloaded, do the following: Uninstall/disable any currently installed K-Lite AV. This will give you a clean computer to start from. Download and install the latest K-Lite AV. Run the K-Lite AV. Download and run the latest version of this scanner. Then run a scan of your entire computer. Make sure you have at least one of these scanners in place as this infection will usually try to hide itself within other applications such as Java and Flash. Step 2: I AM NOT A SCAMMER!!! That's right, we're not scamming you! To protect against being scammed or having your personal information leaked, simply remember to never click on links from unknown websites or companies. Be cautious of any email

Scans for and removes Sobig files and related items.On Thursday, House Speaker Nancy Pelosi announced that House Democrats have begun impeachment proceedings against President Donald Trump. The announcement was made in a letter to her Democratic colleagues, in which Pelosi outlined the facts and criteria for impeachment. However, Pelosi did not say that the Democrats had officially voted on a resolution to begin the impeachment inquiry. Some House Democrats were disappointed that Pelosi did not include a formal vote in her letter, but said they are now prepared to support the inquiry. The vote to begin impeachment proceedings was expected to be taken on Wednesday, but Republican leaders said they wouldn't allow it to be. In a letter to her colleagues, Pelosi said that she wanted the House to vote on the resolution next week to allow more time for lawmakers to make up their minds. "My request is that, at that time, we vote on the resolution to authorize the committees to continue their investigations," Pelosi said. "This is not intended to be an impeachment inquiry. No witness, no evidence was added. We simply authorized our committees to continue their investigation." After the vote, several Democrats said they would support the inquiry. "The point of this process is to allow the American people to make a judgment as to whether or not we move forward with impeachment," Rep. Jamie Raskin, a Democrat from Maryland, said on CNN. House Democratic Leader Steny Hoyer says he's prepared to support an impeachment inquiry. "I think the call is simple, and that is, to investigate whatever may be of value in looking into the election, the 2016 election, in order to try to determine what the causes were, what the reasons were, and so that we can deal with them in the future," Hoyer said, according to a transcript of his remarks. — New York Times Politics (@nytimespolitics) September 24, 2019 "I think we're all beginning to understand the evidence is there, and that there needs to be an investigation," Rep. Sheila Jackson Lee, a Democrat from Texas, said. "I think there's enough to initiate an investigation," Rep. Lacy Clay, a Democrat from Missouri, said. However, the House passed a resolution in January 2017 calling on the Trump administration to investigate Russia's involvement in the 2016 elections, but that inquiry was broadened in April by the attorney general to include the possibility of obstruction. Pelosi had previously resisted calls from Democrats to impeach Trump, saying it was "not worthwhile" to distract from efforts to deliver on progressive policy goals. But the left was quick to point out that the list of Democratic priorities has been moved to the backburner since the party
